

MechCaL to exhibit at the 2014 IMVC Conference

The 10th International Mining Ventilation Conference takes place at Sun City from Tuesday 5 August to Thursday 8 August. Local fans manufacturer, MechCaL will be exhibiting at the conference and will have some of their patented, award winning fan designs on display.

Delegates from across the globe flock to the conference to see the latest in mining ventilation. MechCaL spokesperson, Gavin Ratner says that they have exhibited at IMVC before and will continue to do so as the event puts their products in the spotlight of the world stage. "This will be the largest gathering of ventilation practitioners for years to come as it is truly an international event," says Ratner. "We are jointly holding a stand with one of the oldest fan companies in the world, TLT-Turbo, with whom we have recently signed a distribution agreement for our fans in Europe."

Ratner hopes that the event will bring the product offering exposure to other international markets and even new contracts to send test units for trials internationally. This, he says, is an important focus for their 2014 marketing and sales strategy. "An event such as this that is closely focused on our niche within the industry is significantly better for us than the upcoming Electra mining as it is primarily focused on Ventilation and ventilation equipment and technologies," he comments. "We can, with this event focus on not only Southern African markets but international ones too."

MechCaL's exhibition is located at Stands 21 and 22 beside the main entrance to Sun City's Hall of Treasures.

All media and press are invited to the stand for comments and information on IMVC and MechCaL. Gavin Ratner and several additional MechCaL representatives will be present to answer all questions.
